The bill in the last legislature to annul the lease of the North Carolina railway prevented any railway west of Durham to build any connection within fifteen miles of the South Carolina line.

The people of Burke county are now to vote on the issue of bonds to build a railway from Shelby to Morganton. In an air line Shelby is about nine miles from the South Carolina line. Had the bill passed the building of this road would have been impossible, or else the southern terminus would have had to be in the woods six miles north of Shelby.

The handsome residence of ex-Judge Spier Whitaker, two and one-half miles south of Raleigh, was burned at 2 o'clock this morning. He had moved into the city only a few days ago, and the house, which cost over $5,000, was in charge of a caretaker.

Cotton receipts locally, are very lfberal. Yesterday over 200 bales came in by wagon.

At Scotland Neck Monday evening Rev. James Battle Avirett delivered an address on the life and character of the late Bishop Atkinsor, and his influence on the Episcopal diocese of North Carolina. This morning an alarm of fire was sent in from the central hospital for the insane near here, calling for the Raleigh fire department. The latter responded promptly, but it was found that the fire amounted to nothing.

One hundred of the penitentiary convicts will be sent from there Monday to the Caledonia farm, to pick cotton, and the others save about thirty to the Halifax and Northampton farms. There are 127 at work on the Carthage railway. All of these, save the strongest, will be sent to the Wadesboro farm, and the strength of the force on the Carthage railway will be kept at 100 by new convicts as rapidly as sound ones

Major L. C. Caldwell, of Statesville, is here to ask Governor Russell to pardon W. F. Miller, who killed a man in Iredell six years ago and got a 10-year sentence. February 20th last year Governor Carr refused to pardon him. Negroes in the western counties are making objections, holding meetings

She says he left her when he was only 15 years of age, and when he was condemned to be hung was the first time she had heard from him.

Fayetteville Observer: A pullman car conductor told an Observer reporter last night of the daring escape of a negro from the sheriff of Wilson, on the Atlantic Coast Line northbound train due here at 10:20 last night. The negro's wrists were bound by a rope, the end of which was wrapped around the sheriff's wrist. When ten miles this side of Florence, and while the train was running only twelve miles an hour, the prisoner suddenly leaped from the seat and bounded out of the window, almost dragging the sheriff with him. The officer's wrist and hands were badly lacerated. The negro made good his escape.

Greensboro Telegram: O. D. Boycott, who returned from Mt. Airy last night, tells us of a serious affray that occurred at Flat Rock, just beyond Mt. Airy. Two employes of the Mt. Airy Granite Company, by the name of Ceasor and French, both colored, have had a quarrel on hand for about two weeks, and when the two met Saturday night they proceeded to settle their differences with blows. Ceasor cut French, inflicting a serious wound, and it was thought that he would die, but he was living when Mr. Boycott left Mt. Airy. Ceasor was arrested and confined in jail at Dobson, the county seat Statesville Landmark: Miss Lizzie Young, daughter of Mr. J. P. Young, and Misses Nora and Bertie Beard, drove Mr. Young's horse to the cemetery Sunday afternoon. When they drove on a newly grayled walk at the cemetery the crunching of the gravel frightened the horse so that it ran away. The buggy was overturned and the young ladies thrown out. Fortunately they were not seriously hurt, receiving only a few slight bruises .-Floyd Combs, of Concord township, was visiting at a Mr. Lambert's, on Rocky creek, last week, and when he got out of bed Friday morning a copperhead snake bit him on the foot. His foot and leg were considerably swollen from the poison, but Combs has recovered sufficiently to return home and serious results are not anticipated.

Raleigh News and Observer: On Sun day morning Hickory was the scene of a brutal and outrageous crime. A little negro girl, named Amie Bost, aged about 12 years, was raped by an unknown negro man. She was playing in the woods near East Hickory when the wretch crept up behind her. He seized her and twisted and adopting resolutions because they her bonnet strings around her throat so tightly that she choked and could not scream. He dragged her further into the Lynchite or sanctified band free love woods about a hundred yards and there matter. A preacher from New Jersey accomplished his fiendish purpose. STATE PRESS.

We are glad to see that a number of the leading democratic papers of the state are already advocating a straight fight next year along state lines, without any mixing with populist or anybody else. It is a long time (about a year) beforet he next campaign opens but it is about time our leaders and the press were coming to some definite plan, so that we can begin to unite our forces for the great battle.-Aberdeen

Dr. T. B. Kingsbury, editor of The Wilmington Messenger, has been doing editorial work for thirty-one years. This is a long time for continuous work of that kind, and during those many years. Dr. Kingsbury has written a vast deal for the elevation of his numerous readers and for the welfare of the state. He has been, and is, a power for good in the grand old commonwealth of North Carolina. His influence and talents have always been exerted for the right, and have accomplished much good for the state. We trust that he has many long years of useful work before him-work in which though often hard and trying, we know he must take pleasure in.—Kinston Free Press.

While Dr. Kilgo was not specific in his remarks, yet there cropped out the fact that his aim was to uphold the denominational college and to artfully attack the state university and state schools. His argument that college and university life tended to destroy the former religious training of the student is in large measure true and is to be much deplored. But this is no reason why universiteis, colleges and high schools should be abandoned. The thing to do is to maintain them at any cost, but at the same time insist and compel them to return their graduates to the homes in the some moral and religious conditions at least with which they entered the college or university. The usefulness of the university and state schools must not be destroyed because of this negligence or weakness, whether it be real or imaginary. The fault, if it exists, can be easily corrected and should be speedily. There is no logical reason why state and denominational schools may not be perfectly harmonious. The aim of all should be to make one another stronger and not to tear each other down. There is urgent necessity for both and so long as any possible degree of harmony exists it is important that both be maintained. The time need never come, and The Journal hopes it never will come, when either class will have outlived its usefulness.

Something to Know. It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion, and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. Sold for 50c or $1.00 per bottle at R. A TRIFLE FOR MUCH

How an Old Darkey's Sympathy Was Im pesed Upon

General Nichols, of Louisiana, commanded a brigade of infantry during the valley campaign in Virginia, which so immortalized the name of Stonewall Jackson. In one of the three famous victories over Banks, Milroy and Shields, says The Nashville American, the Louisiana brigade bore a conspicuous part, and its gallant commander was carried from the field, mortally wounded, as every one supposed, but good nursing and skillful surgery saved the life of the gen. eral. He left a leg and an arm on the battlefield, and lost one of his eyes. He wears an artificial leg on one side of his body and an arm on the opposite. The mony of the hypnotist could affect the pluck which enabled him to withstand these terrible wounds, and to which he is indebted for his life, perhaps, more than to any other cause, sticks to him yet; and he is one of the most jovial of men, enjoying a good joke as much as any-body. He tells this on himself: When canvassing for governor, he was invited by a lady who knew of his loss of limbs to make her house his home, and he accepted. She ordered her man sermaster the tariff schedule."-Detroit vant, who knew nothing of the general's C. F. & Y. V. misfortune, see that he was comfortably put to bed. The darkey felt proud of the honor of serving a distinguished general and the next governor, and the general was inclined to be communicative, which delighted the negro very much, and made him feel at home with his guest. When he took the general's arm off and laid it on the table, he commenced to express great sympathy, saying: "It sho' is bad for a man to lose he arm dat erway! An de Yankees done dis, did dey?' When the general told him to take his leg off, the negro thought he was joking, but went at it in a business-like way, though he was almost ready to shed tears of sympathy this time. Placing the leg on the table by the side of the arm, and looking at the general, said: "Umph! leg off on one side, an' arm off on t'other. Dat is too bad, to cut a man up in dat sort o' way!" The general saw his opportunity for a little fun had come, so, leaning his body forward said: "Come, now, take my head off!" But the negro was gone.

Was Not Ashamed

When the learned assistant corporation counsel came into court yesterday, wearing "a gray skirt, narrow white leather belt, black and white check shirt waist, standing collar and black tie," it was at once apparent to the chroniclers of the proceedings that the ery in my store I sent for a bottle and time for a departure in the musty methods of setting down the evolution of the law had arrived.

The entrance of the learned assiswon't keep store or house without it." | tant corporation counsel was, in fact, a kind of informal notification that the law is even now in the process of being invested in shirt waists, gray skirts and other mysteries of multifarious feminine habiliments, and that due regard must be paid to that fact hereafter in the literature of the law.

> The law books will in time be strewn with descriptive sentences of the sort used in reporting those present at the charity ball. Thus: "Opinion of Juggerson, Ch. J. Black silk, cut high in the neck, trimmed with "Dissenting opinion by Pugsley, J (Tailor-made gown of blue cloth, full in the skirt, pearlornaments.)" The journalistic account of the trial will say: "Counsel for complainant then arose to reply, wearing a lovely satin dress, trimmed with lace." What a world of opportunity for crushing repartee the newy order will afford. Thus, in the heat of forensic debate, shouts like this may be delivered: "I dissent, your honors, from the position taken by counsel for the other side, whose hat, I may remark in passing, was not on straight." Or: "May it please the court, the precedent which opposing counsel has cited no more fits this case than her jacket fits her back. Her deductions, like her front hair, are false."-Chicago Daily News.

The boy is a member of the Plymouth Congregational Sunday school, and it is the custom of the pastor of the church to give every child in the Sabbath school a nice little Bible on the Sunday following his seventh birthday. Last Sunday it was Master Kerr's time to receive a Bible, and when his name was called he marched up with a black eye he had received in a fight with another urchin the day before. The pastor eyed the boy's face narrowly and the whole congregation tittered. The little fellow flushed with embarrassment, but accepted the Bible as gracefully as possible, listened to the few words of commendation and advice, and started for his seat. The tittering was renewed, and when half way down the aisle the boy's pet up feelings could be restrained no longer. He resented the imputation conveyed, first by the pastor's searching gaze, and then by the congregation's amusement, and, stopping in the aisle, he turned around and shouted:

"Well, I licked him, anyway."
